

Faculty of ArtsPROGRAMS AND ACADEMIC DEPARTMENTS*FRENCH AND SPANISH DEPARTMENT

French and Spanish Studies at Ryerson place a strong emphasis on language skills, oral comprehension and expression. In French, the department has a range of offerings from introductory level language courses to upper level courses in both language and literature. Some of the more advanced courses focus on communication skills, composition, literature, stylistics, translation, and Business French. In Spanish, three levels of language courses are offered: introductory, intermediate and advanced, along with courses in language and culture. The department also offers a limited number of courses in English on the literature and culture of the French-speaking and Spanish-speaking world.

Correct French and Spanish, like English, are the same regardless of the country in which they are spoken. However, there are regional differences in intonation, accent and idiom just as literatures differ from one country to another. Our courses reflect this by exposing students to French as it is spoken in Canada and in the rest of the French-speaking world; similarly, students of Spanish learn to appreciate the differences between Spanish as it is spoken in Spain and in the various Spanish-speaking countries of Latin America and the Caribbean.

Admission and Enrollment Procedures

The process is the same for both disciplines. Admission is by an online placement test and/or by an interview during specific periods in the year. Students should check the Website of the Department of French and Spanish to find out when the placement test is available. Admission is granted on a first-come, first-served basis and late registrants are normally not accepted.

The wide diversity of students' educational backgrounds at Ryerson makes testing necessary: it allows faculty to counsel students accurately as to which course or courses are appropriate and it ensures a uniform level of language skills in each class. Students who have never taken language courses at Ryerson University are therefore required to take the placement test to ensure that they are placed in the appropriate level. Please note that students willfully or inadvertently enrolled in the wrong course(s) may be forced to re-enroll at the Instructor's discretion, or drop the course(s). HISTORY DEPARTMENT

The Department of History serves full- and part-time students through the university's regular programs and the G. Raymond Chang School of Continuing Education. Students typically take History courses to meet their Liberal Studies requirements out of interest in the subject matter and/or to enhance their professional competencies (such as Business or Journalism). Other people study History as part of a specific program requirement, such as the Arts and Contemporary Studies program Options 'Global Studies' and 'Inquiry and Invention'. Others pursue the comprehensive History Option within the program, which not only allows for the in-depth study of many fascinating questions as part of a person's intellectual formation and career training, but also prepares individuals for graduate school or subject specialization in Teachers' College.

Some courses survey broad historical topics while others explore specialized themes, and both lower-level and upper-level offerings provide excellent opportunities to deepen students' appreciation of the forces that have shaped the human experience. Instructors draw upon such diverse sources as cultural, economic, gender, intellectual, international, material, political, scientific, and social history in presenting their courses. They also train students in key aspects of the historian's craft, including approaches to framing questions and marshalling evidence to support arguments. Courses range from explorations of history through film, to the history of technology and science, to the national and regional histories of North America, Europe, Africa, and Asia, to other critically-important issues, such as diasporas, "race," urbanization, international relations and conflict, and espionage and propaganda.

PHILOSOPHY AND MUSIC DEPARTMENT

The Department of Philosophy and Music offers courses in all programs of the University. Some deal with such issues as the problem of objective moral judgement, moral issues posed by medicine and psychiatry, business, education, law, politics, the media, problems of punishment and responsibility, human rights, sexual behaviour, social change, rising technocracy and technological development, and so on. Others analyse the foundations of knowledge, religion, and the arts, problems in the pure and applied natural and social sciences, divergent social and economic ideologies, political freedom and free will, human nature and the relation between mind and body. In sum, they provide the critical enlightenment expected of professionals who have been educated in the social and cultural contexts of their practices and in the forms of knowledge in which these practices have their roots.

The Department of Philosophy and Music includes a Musicology Section which offers courses in Music History.

ADMISSION: O.S.S.D. with six Grade 12 U/M courses, including Grade 12 U English.

Applicants who do not meet this requirement may be eligible for admission under Ryerson's Mature Student guidelines.

NOTES:

ENG4U/EAE4U is the preferred English.

The grade required in the subject prerequisite (normally in the 65-70 percent range) will be determined subject to competition.

Students are admitted three times a year in the Fall, Winter and Spring/Summer terms.

Subject to competition, candidates may be required to present averages/grades above the minimum.

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

Ryerson offers the only part-time undergraduate degree program in public administration in Ontario. The program is specifically designed for those working in the public and para-public sectors and in non-governmental organizations and advocacy groups, those aspiring to careers in the broader public service, private-sector employees who are in regular contact with government, and those interested in gaining knowledge about public administration and public policy in Canada. The curriculum reflects the latest developments in public sector issues and initiatives, and features a mix of courses providing students with a broad understanding of the Canadian political process. The courses emphasize the importance of linking the theory and practice of public administration to concerns of political economy and public policy.

The program is also delivered to First Nations administrators through a partnership with the First Nations Technical Institute (FNTI) and to fire services personnel through a partnership with the Office of the (Ontario) Fire Marshal (OFM) and the Ontario Association of Fire Chiefs (O AFC).

The program provides students with:

- a better understanding of organizations and operations in the public sector
- the attainment of analytic, administrative, communication and management skills necessary for career development in the public sector and in organizations that deal with it

- an awareness of the political forces that shape public administration and policy

Those currently working in or dealing with the public sector will enjoy the immediate benefit of improved understanding of their work environment and greater potential for long-term career development and mobility.

To enhance the flexibility of learning opportunities, the program offers courses in various teaching modes including classes at Ryerson campus, distance education, intensive study, and on-site delivery at various locations.

The Public Administration and Governance program consists of three separate, but interrelated levels of study that allow students to set their own educational goals. Students may apply to graduate with a Certificate after completing Level 1, with an Advanced Certificate after completing Level 2, and with a Bachelor of Arts Degree after completing Level 3.

Each level features a mix of program courses in Canadian politics, policy, and public administration, complemented by professionally-related offerings in areas such as accounting, economics, communication, human resource management, and business technology management. Also included are liberal studies courses to broaden intellectual horizons and create an awareness of the philosophical and moral premises upon which many public administration activities are based.

CERTIFICATE (LEVEL 1): In order to earn a Certificate, students are required to take eight courses. Students will be introduced to the basics of public administration. They can then choose two courses in Canadian, Ontario, Local, or Indigenous Politics. Students may also develop or enhance administrative skills by choosing professionally-related courses in accounting, communication, economics, human resources management, information technology management, law, non-profit and voluntary sector management, and occupational and public health.

ADVANCED CERTIFICATE (LEVEL 2): Students can continue into Level 2 of the program and obtain an Advanced Certificate after completing eight additional courses. At this level, students will analyse the framework of public policy, and will have the opportunity to explore the relationship between government and labour, the ideological basis for administrative institutions and financial management. Students will continue to develop their administrative and communication skills by choosing additional professionally-related courses from a lengthy table.

DEGREE (LEVEL 3): Students at Level 3 will participate in a sophisticated investigation of specialized areas in public administration, beginning with a required course in Research Methods. Students will then select eight courses that allow for the exploration of theories of bureaucracy and organization, administrative law, e-Government, financial planning and management, intergovernmental relations, collaborative governance, program planning and evaluation, current issues, and comparative public policy. Administrative skill development continues in Level 3 with a minimum of two professionally-related courses from the lengthy table. Students who have a minimum of two years of work experience in the public, para-public or voluntary/non-profit sectors may apply to pursue the practicum option. Students eligible for the practicum are encouraged to situate their practicum paper in an area related to their work environment. Students who pursue the Research Paper Option must complete an additional two professional courses, an additional five professionally-related courses, and a Public Policy Research Paper. Students admitted through a First Nations partnership follow the general outline of the Practicum Option, but complete a series of courses specially designed to address an Indigenous context. Upon successful completion of Level 3, students may apply to graduate with a Bachelor of Arts in Public Administration and Governance.

Students may apply for transfer credit or advanced standing based on previous post-secondary studies. Consult the Department of Politics and Public Administration for details.
