
DINING ALONE AT ANNAPURNA

Fountain water
repeating its gurgle
in the corner.

Linoleum the colour of lapis.
Hanging bells.
The man with the buckwheat

honey skin and glorious toothless grin asks me if it's too cold to dine with the back door open.

The seeds my tongue seeks
in the palate of the poppadum.