- Remote or in person

About the Degree

Two Creative Fields

Students choose two creative fields: fashion management, music industry, film business, journalism, publishing, theatre, radio & television, curatorial practice, graphic communications, and interior design.

Communications & Professional Foundation

Includes intellectual property, digital design, marketing, entrepreneurship, economic development strategies for creative enterprises.

Business Concentration

Development of analytical skills through courses in operations & financial management, market analysis, budgets & forecasts.

How it works:

Send us an internship posting and we'll share it with the students. They can apply directly to you or we can collect the applications and send them over in one package. From there we leave it to you to reach out to anyone who you think might be a fit. Easy!

Students need to complete 240 hours (full- or part-time). At the end of the internship period, we'll send you a short evaluation form to gather some feedback on the student's performance. That's all we ask of the supervisor (we know you're busy!)

Why Choose a Creative Industries Intern?

Mature, Well-Rounded & Knowledgeable

Students complete three years of the degree prior to the internship. This ensures students gain maturity, acquire experience and attain a sound knowledge base prior to the work placement.

Only High Achievers

Entrance to this program requires an exceptional academic record. These are high achieving students with an interest in business and a passion for media, arts and design.

A Well-Stocked Toolkit

The core student skill set includes practical communications and design tools, an understanding of relevant issues and business savvy. Students can assist in a variety of areas, including social media management, business administration, and research across all media.

Aspiring to Careers in the Industry

With a keen eye to the future, students tailor their programs to prepare for careers in specific creative industries. Their education is a strategic first step towards entering the field. They're resourceful, proactive and looking to learn from the ground up.
