Master of Health Administration (Community Care)

Launched in 2018, the Ted Rogers School of Management's MHA(CC) is the first program of its kind in Canada. With the increasing importance of community care within the greater health-care system, there is a growing demand for graduate-prepared leaders in private, public and not-for-profit organizations. Focusing on diversity, innovation and entrepreneurship, the MHA(CC) curriculum is designed to prepare graduates to effectively start, lead and/or manage organizations within this dynamic and growing sector. This program is designed for professionals already working in health care and those interested in transitioning into this vital and rewarding sector. The program's convenient downtown location and modular format enables students to work full-time while completing the program in 16 months.

Curricular Highlights

In a university known for its career-focused curriculum and experiential curricular learning opportunities, we integrate real-world experiences across all aspects of the program. In the Capstone course, students will work directly with home and community-care organizations to address issues and solve problems collaboratively.

Faculty Research Areas

- Comparative Health-Care Policy and Management
- Promoting Healthy Aging in Place
- Addictions and Chronic Illness
