A Mohawk Memoir from the War of 1812: John Norton – Teyoninhokarawen

Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2019

This book presents the story of John Norton, or Teyoninhokarawen, an important war chief and diplomatic figure among the Grand River Haudenosaunee (or Six Nations Iroquois) in Upper Canada. He saw more action during the War of 1812 than almost anyone else, being present at the fall of Detroit; the capture of Fort Niagara; the battles of Queenston Heights, Fort George, Stoney Creek, Chippawa, and Lundy's Lane; the blockades of Forts George and Erie, as well as a large number of skirmishes and front-line patrols.

Norton's memoir describes the fighting, the stresses suffered by Indigenous peoples, and the complex relationships between the Haudenosaunee and both their British allies and other First Nations communities. His words, penned in 1815 and 1816, provide one-third of the book's content; the remainder consists mainly of Carl Benn's introductions and annotations to enable readers to understand Teyoninhokarawen's autobiography within its historical contexts.

Native Memoirs from the War of 1812: Black Hawk and William Apess

Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 2014

Two famous First Nations people who lived in the United States recorded their memoirs from the War of 1812 in detail. One was Black Hawk, or Makataimeshekiakiak, the famous British-allied war chief of the still-independent Sauks from the upper Mississippi River. The other was American soldier William Apess, a Pequot from reservation society in Connecticut. The book presents the wartime passages of their autobiographies (originally published in the 1830s) and provides extensive introductions and annotations to maximize readers' understanding of these rare Native-authored texts. Native Memoirs also includes a detailed Indigenous-centred interpretive chronology of the War of 1812.

Mohawks on the Nile: Natives Among the Canadian Voyageurs in Egypt, 1884-1885

Toronto: Dundurn Press, 2009

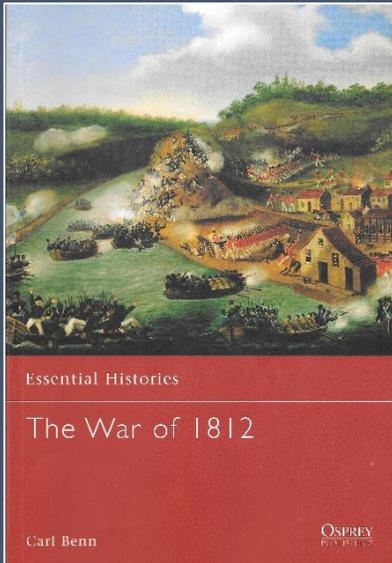

During the Sudan War of the 1880s, sixty Mohawks left their homes in Canada to pilot British army whaleboats up the treacherous waters of the Nile River as part of a relief force that attempted to save Major-General Charles Gordon, besieged in Khartoum. This book explores that story and places it within the broader contexts of Mohawk labour, identity, and the alliance relationship with the Crown. Additionally, it presents the memoirs of two Mohawk veterans of the expedition – Louis Jackson and James Deer – as well as eyewitness accounts of the Mohawk contribution to the campaign, an annotated roll of the voyageurs, and informative appendices.
