Jessica Konkle (she/her) is an actor originally from the quaint area of Fonthill, Ontario. She embraces her connection to her small town roots, and looks at the world with a curious mind and open heart. She is eager to learn, explore, and try new things!

While studying at TMU, Jessica has had the privilege of being taught by many of Toronto's top theatre/film professionals, including Cynthia Ashperger, Marianne Mclsaac, Philippa Domville, Tim Welham, Jennifer Wigmore, and Paul de Jong. She has had the opportunity to play many wonderful roles during her time in school, such as Father in Eurydice, Sonya in Uncle Vanya, and W in LUNGS.

Jessica would like to thank her family and friends for fostering a positive environment to grow up in and encouraging her to pursue a career in the arts. Their constant love and support have helped her grow into both the artist and person she is today. She would also like to thank her beautifully talented class for challenging and pushing her. She looks forward to whatever the future may hold, embracing the exciting unknown!
