Landon Nesbitt (he/him) is an LGBT actor, photographer, director and artist born and raised in Edmonton, Alberta. Landon wants to be a part of new and exciting stories that subvert tropes and embrace positive representation for queer communities.

While at Toronto Metropolitan University, Landon played the role of Andrew Kushnir in Andrew Kushnir's new play The Division in partnership with Tarragon theatre. In addition, Landon has played King Edward II in Alistair Newton's adaptation of Edward II, and Buckingham in Richard III. Landon has had the opportunity to train with a variety of amazing instructors including Tim Welham, Jennifer Wigmore, Paul De Jong, Phillipa Domville, Laura Nordin, Cynthia Ashperger and Marianne Mcissac.

Outside of Toronto Metropolitan University, Landon played Duncan in Kat Sandler's Punch Up at Theatre on the Ridge, Peter Fechter in Peter Fechter: 59 Minutes at the Pocket Festival, and he originated the role of Two in The 3am Subtext with Glass Buffalo Theatre in Edmonton.

Landon is very excited and grateful to be beginning a career in the arts and he cannot wait to see where this journey takes him.
