Tom Shoshani (he/him) is an Israeli born, Canadian actor who was raised in Vancouver and now lives in Toronto. He found his passion for acting at a young age during his fourth grade production of As You Like It, and has since continued to pursue a career of telling stories.

During his time at TMU, Tom had the pleasure of working with some of Canada's top theatre instructors including (but not limited to): Cole Lewis, Lisa Cox, Marianne Mclsaac, Paul De Jong, Tim Welham, Phillipa Domville, Cynthia Ashperger, and Jennifer Wigmore. He has also recently had the opportunity to work with Andrew Kushnir in his new play, The Division, which workshopped at Tarragon Theatre. As well, over the summer, Tom originated the role of Narcissus in the play Echo by Kole Durnford which ran at the Terra Firma Festival in Toronto and at the Edmonton Fringe. Echo was also recently selected to the Toronto Next Stage Festival for 2023. In the Spring, Tom will be returning to his role of Saul in Summer of Semitism at the Winnipeg Jewish Theatre.

Tom is extremely grateful for his time at theatre school, and is incredibly excited to fully pursue a career in film/television and theatre following his graduation.
